For my logo, I chose to use the golden rectangle. For this project, I really didn't have an idea of what I wanted to do to represent me. I had a couple of ideas involving other shapes and some knots, but nothing to represent me. So I show to represent something on me. That is a part of me, my glasses.

I originally wanted to use a series of loops to represent my glasses in a way that would be fun and Interesting, but to make that symmetrical into a logo is very challenging in Google drawing. So I went with the other alternative option and made the golden rectangle, one for each of my Lens is in my glasses. The left one I filled up with the rest of the golden rectangles. And then finally, I gave it a blue background behind the lenses. I did the blue because my eye color is blue and I thought it would be another part of me to represent.

The reason I did my right eye as the one with the extra rectangles is that is the eye that I see out of the very best. It can be taken as the right eye having more ideas and more visible capabilities. I tried to go for more simple design because that's what most companies do nowadays. I'm not the most creative person in the world, especially when involving mathematics so I hope this will stand out somewhat.
