Breakout Sessions Descriptions

Session 1A	BUILDing Healthy Communities Through Data Driven Approaches This session will focus on what the relationship between poverty and health looks like in Northern Kentucky. We will present our work on mapping socio-economic determinants of health and major diseases in our community and how that relates to the development of data driven interventions that are focused through the lens of health equity. You will learn about those interventions associated with tobacco use, in particular.	SU 109
	Panelists: Deborah Young, Public Health Informatics Manager, Northern Kentucky Health Department Mary Singler, Community Health Promotion Manager, Northern Kentucky Health Department Ned Kalapasev, GIS Manager, Northern Kentucky Health Department Facilitator: Valerie Hardcastle, St. Elizabeth Healthcare Executive Director of the Institute for Health Innovation, Vice President for Health Innovation
Session 1B	The Ripple Effect: Poverty and Education Education holds the greatest promise in helping students and families overcome poverty. This session examines the crucial role of education, as well as how poverty affects the ability of educators and school administrators to provide quality education to students in the Northern Kentucky/Cincinnati region. The panel will discuss the challenges of educating students as a result of poverty in the region and what opportunities and strategies are available to support students and families.	SU 107B
	Panelists: Kathy Burkhardt, Superintendent, Erlanger-Elsmere School District Jessica Averitt Taylor, FUEL NKU, Associate Professor, Social Work Program Lauren Copeland, Founding Director of Scholar House, Brighton Center, Inc. Facilitator: Dorea Glance, Assistant Professor, School Counseling Program, NKU
Session 1C	A Couch is Not a Home: The Community Impact Matthew Desmond, author of Evicted says: "Without a home everything else falls apart." This panel will continue the conversation on the struggle to find adequate housing in the Northern Kentucky/Cincinnati region and ask "Where are we now a year later?" This session will also discuss the challenges of finding safe, affordable housing, define homelessness and the criteria for assistance, and address how to make the connection to resources.	SU 107C
	Panelists: Nancy Grayson, President, Horizon Community Funds of Northern Kentucky Seth Cutter, Manager, Strategic Planning and Public Policy at Kenton County Airport Board Edwin King, President/CEO, Kentucky Housing Corporation Facilitator: Christopher Lawrence, Associate Professor, Clinical Mental Health Counseling Program, NKU

Afternoon Presentations

Lunch Presentation 11:45-12:45	Maintaining One's Health While Homeless This presentation will address the connection between homelessness and health with recommendations for improving homeless health outcomes and reducing cost to health, social service, and criminal justice systems. Presenter: Jennifer Cline, Nurse Practitioner, Open Door Program, Welcome House	SU Ballroom
Afternoon Presentation 1:00-2:00	An Economic Agenda for a Thriving Commonwealth This presentation describes strategies for building a prosperous Kentucky. The healthier, more educated and financially secure we are as individuals, families and communities, the more prosperous we will be as a state. To get there requires public policies that build capacities, open up opportunities and promote equity. Presenter: Ashley Spalding, Senior Policy Analyst, Kentucky Center for Economic Policy	SU Ballroom

Presenters and Panelists

Justin Pasquariello was inspired to help improve the health and development of young children after experiencing many of his childhood years in the foster care system. After attending Harvard Business School and the Kennedy School of Government, he began his work at Children’s HealthWatch, a research and policy organization that improves the health and development of young children by monitoring policies to address and alleviate economic hardships. His experience there led him to develop Silver Lining Mentoring, a Boston-based organization that helps youth flourish through mentoring relationships and the development of critical life skills. Currently, Mr. Pasquariello is the executive director of the East Boston Social Centers, a 100 year-old multi-service agency serving a diverse population of all ages in the Boston area.
