

Final Proposal

For the purposes of our survey, I liked Kensey's and Kara's questions and statements the most, but preferred the way Betsy worded her items. Along with the Haley's ideas on how to number the scales, the survey should be easy enough, simple enough, and clear enough for participants to understand. One thing that was not mentioned that we should approach in our survey is adding one or two more questions and the size of our paper.

The final survey will consist of seven questions and a demographics portion on a half sheet of paper. This way potential participants will see that it is a quick survey and will not take too much of their time. They will only have four answers for each statement which forces them to pick one side. Each statement and answer is set up in the same format along with the same font to reduce bias and confusion.

The final survey:
